

Subject: Fwd: This Week in News // A Talk with WFYI's Jill Ditmire // Readers Reflect on Indy's Music Strategy
From: Rob Burgess <rburgess@nuvo.net>
To: Rob Burgess <robertandertonburgess@gmail.com>
Date Sent: Wed, 17 Apr 2019 14:30:00 -0400
Date Received:

---

----- Forwarded message -----

From: NUVO <newsletter@nuvo.net>

Date: Wed, Mar 6, 2019 at 1:10 PM

Subject: This Week in News // A Talk with WFYI's Jill Ditmire // Readers Reflect on Indy's Music Strategy

To: <rburgess@nuvo.net>

/Slash: Wednesday, March 6

This Week in News

Updated 3 hrs ago

Hello,

Happy Wednesday! And, Happy Ash Wednesday specifically to those of you who are celebrating the first day of Lent today. It's Rob Burgess, NUVO News Editor, back with you once again.

First of all, as you may have heard, NUVO is going through some pretty big changes. Please take time to read this letter from our publisher, Kevin McKinney. And, after you do that, please become a member.

Second, I wanted to update you on my progress researching the question you selected for me to report from our first round of City Committee voting. Once again,

here's the winning question:

“My questions are about Indianapolis migration trends within I-465. Is the downtown housing boom sustainable? How many racial and economic minorities are being forced out? Where are they going? I'd like to see a story focused on answering these questions.”

As I said in last week's newsletter, I am really excited by the responses readers have shared to my request for help on this subject.

Allison Luthe, executive director of the Martin Luther King Community Center, pointed me towards the work of the Indiana University Public Policy Institute. After I mentioned that in last week's newsletter, Leslie Wells, assistant director of communications for the School of Public and Environmental Affairs at PPI, offered to put me in touch with Breanca Merritt, the director for PPI's Center for Research on Inclusion and Social Policy. I just emailed her back to set up a time to talk early next week.

Also, Jennifer Chan of Porch Light PR, reached out after last week's newsletter went out to suggest Joanna Taft, executive director of the Harrison Center, as a possible resource. I also just emailed her back to set up a time to talk next week, as well.

Thursday evening at The Toby at Newfields, I had the chance to listen to a presentation by Pulitzer Prize-winning author Matthew Desmond. An anonymous donor purchased 200 copies of his book, Evicted: Poverty and Profit in the American City. Abri Hochstetler, associate director of communications and annual giving for the Greater Indy Habitat for Humanity, who invited me to attend the event, was generous enough to provide me a copy.

I am reading it now. It's a stunning work so far. The housing crisis is such an expansive topic, and I think Desmond does a great service by focusing on a few families. People get turned off if they think a problem is too big, and humanizing it in this way is so important. Have you read this book? Send me an email at rburgess@nuvo.net and let me know what you thought. I'd love to hear your perspective.

After Matthew's talk, there was a panel discussion moderated by Pamela Ross, vice president of opportunity, equity and inclusion with Central Indiana Community Foundation. Panelists included: Joyce Hertko, PhD, director of community outreach and engagement at Indiana University Health; Vop Osili, chair of the Indianapolis City-County Council; George McMannis, vice president of compliance and operations, BWI Property Management; Michael Hurst, senior attorney at Indiana Legal Services; and Crystal Haslett, MSW, LCSW, coordinator of student programs and McKinney-Vento Education for Homeless Children and Youth liaison, Metropolitan School District of Washington Township. It was a great discussion which I think will add a lot of depth to this story.

Third, I'm spending the day at the Statehouse today for 2019 Renewable Energy Day as advocates from across Indiana will "meet with lawmakers and rally for clean energy policies that will create good-paying jobs, improve air and water quality, and lower electric bills for all Hoosiers." Attendees will include renewable energy supporters from around the state, supported by Solar United Neighbors of Indiana, Indiana Distributed Energy Alliance, Hoosier Interfaith Power & Light, Citizens Action Coalition, Hoosier Environmental Council, Solarize Indiana, Sierra Club, and Earth Charter Indiana. If you're around, please make sure to stop by and say hello.

I hope you have an amazing rest of your week. Talk to you again next Wednesday.

Best,

Rob Burgess

Still Curious, Still a Mix: A Talk with WFYI's Jill Ditmire

Jill Ditmire talks not only about her weekly arts program Curious Mix on WFYI 90.1, but also about her six-year-stint as owner of the Mass Ave Wine Shoppe. Read more

Readers Reflect on Indy's Music Strategy: Part 1

Seth asked our readers for their thoughts on Indy's music community and ways they think it can improve. Read more

Taking a New Direction In Journalism

NUVO is reinventing community journalism online and we want you to be a part of it. Will you join us? Read more

NUVO, 3951 N. Meridian St., Suite 200, Indianapolis, IN 46208

SafeUnsubscribe™ rburgess@nuvo.net

Update Profile | About our service provider

Sent by newsletter@nuvo.net

--

Rob Burgess
News Editor, NUVO
NUVO.net
Phone: 317-808-4614
Twitter: @robaburg

Subject: Fwd: This Week in News // A Talk with WFYI's Jill Ditmire // Readers Reflect on Indy's Music Strategy
From: Rob Burgess <rburgess@nuvo.net>
To: Joe Amditis <jamditis@gmail.com>
Date Sent: Wed, 6 Mar 2019 14:33:36 -0500
Date Received:

---

----- Forwarded message -----

From: NUVO <newsletter@nuvo.net>

Date: Wed, Mar 6, 2019 at 1:10 PM

Subject: This Week in News // A Talk with WFYI's Jill Ditmire // Readers Reflect on Indy's Music Strategy

To: <rburgess@nuvo.net>

/Slash: Wednesday, March 6

This Week in News

Updated 3 hrs ago

Hello,

Happy Wednesday! And, Happy Ash Wednesday specifically to those of you who are celebrating the first day of Lent today. It's Rob Burgess, NUVO News Editor, back with you once again.

First of all, as you may have heard, NUVO is going through some pretty big changes. Please take time to read this letter from our publisher, Kevin McKinney. And, after you do that, please become a member.

Second, I wanted to update you on my progress researching the question you selected for me to report from our first round of City Committee voting. Once again,

here's the winning question:

“My questions are about Indianapolis migration trends within I-465. Is the downtown housing boom sustainable? How many racial and economic minorities are being forced out? Where are they going? I'd like to see a story focused on answering these questions.”

As I said in last week's newsletter, I am really excited by the responses readers have shared to my request for help on this subject.

Allison Luthe, executive director of the Martin Luther King Community Center, pointed me towards the work of the Indiana University Public Policy Institute. After I mentioned that in last week's newsletter, Leslie Wells, assistant director of communications for the School of Public and Environmental Affairs at PPI, offered to put me in touch with Breanca Merritt, the director for PPI's Center for Research on Inclusion and Social Policy. I just emailed her back to set up a time to talk early next week.

Also, Jennifer Chan of Porch Light PR, reached out after last week's newsletter went out to suggest Joanna Taft, executive director of the Harrison Center, as a possible resource. I also just emailed her back to set up a time to talk next week, as well.

Thursday evening at The Toby at Newfields, I had the chance to listen to a presentation by Pulitzer Prize-winning author Matthew Desmond. An anonymous donor purchased 200 copies of his book, Evicted: Poverty and Profit in the American City. Abri Hochstetler, associate director of communications and annual giving for the Greater Indy Habitat for Humanity, who invited me to attend the event, was generous enough to provide me a copy.

I am reading it now. It's a stunning work so far. The housing crisis is such an expansive topic, and I think Desmond does a great service by focusing on a few families. People get turned off if they think a problem is too big, and humanizing it in this way is so important. Have you read this book? Send me an email at rburgess@nuvo.net and let me know what you thought. I'd love to hear your perspective.

After Matthew's talk, there was a panel discussion moderated by Pamela Ross, vice president of opportunity, equity and inclusion with Central Indiana Community Foundation. Panelists included: Joyce Hertko, PhD, director of community outreach and engagement at Indiana University Health; Vop Osili, chair of the Indianapolis City-County Council; George McMannis, vice president of compliance and operations, BWI Property Management; Michael Hurst, senior attorney at Indiana Legal Services; and Crystal Haslett, MSW, LCSW, coordinator of student programs and McKinney-Vento Education for Homeless Children and Youth liaison, Metropolitan School District of Washington Township. It was a great discussion which I think will add a lot of depth to this story.

Third, I'm spending the day at the Statehouse today for 2019 Renewable Energy Day as advocates from across Indiana will "meet with lawmakers and rally for clean energy policies that will create good-paying jobs, improve air and water quality, and lower electric bills for all Hoosiers." Attendees will include renewable energy supporters from around the state, supported by Solar United Neighbors of Indiana, Indiana Distributed Energy Alliance, Hoosier Interfaith Power & Light, Citizens Action Coalition, Hoosier Environmental Council, Solarize Indiana, Sierra Club, and Earth Charter Indiana. If you're around, please make sure to stop by and say hello.

I hope you have an amazing rest of your week. Talk to you again next Wednesday.

Best,

Rob Burgess

Still Curious, Still a Mix: A Talk with WFYI's Jill Ditmire

Jill Ditmire talks not only about her weekly arts program Curious Mix on WFYI 90.1, but also about her six-year-stint as owner of the Mass Ave Wine Shoppe. Read more

Readers Reflect on Indy's Music Strategy: Part 1

Seth asked our readers for their thoughts on Indy's music community and ways they think it can improve. Read more

Taking a New Direction In Journalism

NUVO is reinventing community journalism online and we want you to be a part of it. Will you join us? Read more

NUVO, 3951 N. Meridian St., Suite 200, Indianapolis, IN 46208

SafeUnsubscribe™ rburgess@nuvo.net

--

Rob Burgess
News Editor, NUVO
NUVO.net
Phone: 317-808-4614
Twitter: @robaburg

Subject: This Week in News // A Talk with WFYT's Jill Ditmire // Readers Reflect on Indy's Music Strategy

From: NUVO <newsletter@nuvo.net>

To: editors@nuvo.net

Date Sent: Wed, 6 Mar 2019 13:10:17 -0500 (EST)

Date Received: Wed, 06 Mar 2019 10:10:29 -0800 (PST)

/Slash: Wednesday, March 6

This Week in News

Updated 3 hrs ago

Hello,

Happy Wednesday! And, Happy Ash Wednesday specifically to those of you who are celebrating the first day of Lent today. It's Rob Burgess, NUVO News Editor, back with you once again.

First of all, as you may have heard, NUVO is going through some pretty big changes. Please take time to read this letter from our publisher, Kevin McKinney. And, after you do that, please become a member.

Second, I wanted to update you on my progress researching the question you selected for me to report from our first round of City Committee voting. Once again, here's the winning question:

"My questions are about Indianapolis migration trends within I-465. Is the downtown housing boom sustainable? How many racial and economic minorities are being forced out? Where are they going? I'd like to see a story focused on answering these questions."

As I said in last week's newsletter, I am really excited by the responses readers have shared to my request for help on this subject.

Allison Luthe, executive director of the Martin Luther King Community Center, pointed me towards the work of the Indiana University Public Policy Institute. After I mentioned that in last week's newsletter, Leslie Wells, assistant director of communications for the School of Public and Environmental Affairs at PPI, offered to put me in touch with Breanca Merritt, the director for PPI's Center for Research on Inclusion and Social Policy. I just emailed her back to set up a time to talk early next week.

Also, Jennifer Chan of Porch Light PR, reached out after last week's newsletter went out to suggest Joanna Taft, executive director of the Harrison Center, as a possible resource. I also just emailed her back to set up a time to talk next week, as well.

Thursday evening at The Toby at Newfields, I had the chance to listen to a presentation by Pulitzer Prize-winning author Matthew Desmond. An anonymous donor purchased 200 copies of his book, Evicted: Poverty and Profit in the American City. Abri Hochstetler, associate director of communications and annual giving for the Greater Indy Habitat for Humanity, who invited me to attend the event, was generous enough to provide me a copy.

I am reading it now. It's a stunning work so far. The housing crisis is such an expansive topic, and I think Desmond does a great service by focusing on a few families. People get turned off if they think a problem is too big, and humanizing it in this way is so important. Have you read this book? Send me an email at rburgess@nuvo.net and let me know what you thought. I'd love to hear your perspective.

After Matthew's talk, there was a panel discussion moderated by Pamela Ross, vice president of opportunity, equity and inclusion with Central Indiana Community Foundation. Panelists included: Joyce Hertko, PhD, director of community outreach and engagement at Indiana University Health; Vop Osili, chair of the Indianapolis City-County Council; George McMannis, vice president of compliance and operations, BWI Property Management; Michael Hurst, senior attorney at Indiana Legal Services; and Crystal Haslett, MSW, LCSW, coordinator of student programs and McKinney-Vento

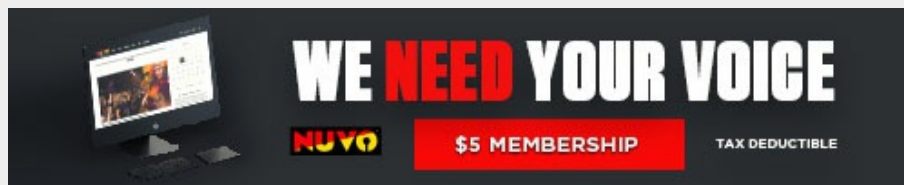

Education for Homeless Children and Youth liaison, Metropolitan School District of Washington Township. It was a great discussion which I think will add a lot of depth to this story.

Third, I'm spending the day at the Statehouse today for 2019 Renewable Energy Day as advocates from across Indiana will "meet with lawmakers and rally for clean energy policies that will create good-paying jobs, improve air and water quality, and lower electric bills for all Hoosiers." Attendees will include renewable energy supporters from around the state, supported by Solar United Neighbors of Indiana, Indiana Distributed Energy Alliance, Hoosier Interfaith Power & Light, Citizens Action Coalition, Hoosier Environmental Council, Solarize Indiana, Sierra Club, and Earth Charter Indiana. If you're around, please make sure to stop by and say hello.

I hope you have an amazing rest of your week. Talk to you again next Wednesday.

Best,

Rob Burgess

Still Curious, Still a Mix: A Talk with WFYI's Jill Ditmire

Jill Ditmire talks not only about her weekly arts program Curious Mix on WFYI 90.1, but also about her six-year-stint as owner of the Mass Ave Wine Shoppe. Read more

Readers Reflect on Indy's Music Strategy: Part 1

Seth asked our readers for their thoughts on Indy's music community and ways they think it can improve. Read more

Taking a New Direction In Journalism

NUVO is reinventing community journalism online and we want you to be a part of it. Will you join us? Read more

NUVO, 3951 N. Meridian St., Suite 200, Indianapolis, IN 46208

SafeUnsubscribe™ editors@nuvo.net

Update Profile | About our service provider

Sent by newsletter@nuvo.net

Subject: This Week in News // A Talk with WFYT's Jill Ditmire // Readers Reflect on Indy's Music Strategy

From: NUVO <newsletter@nuvo.net>

To: rburgess@nuvo.net

Date Sent: Wed, 6 Mar 2019 13:10:18 -0500 (EST)

Date Received: Wed, 06 Mar 2019 10:10:29 -0800 (PST)

/Slash: Wednesday, March 6

This Week in News

Updated 3 hrs ago

Hello,

Happy Wednesday! And, Happy Ash Wednesday specifically to those of you who are celebrating the first day of Lent today. It's Rob Burgess, NUVO News Editor, back with you once again.

First of all, as you may have heard, NUVO is going through some pretty big changes. Please take time to read this letter from our publisher, Kevin McKinney. And, after you do that, please become a member.

Second, I wanted to update you on my progress researching the question you selected for me to report from our first round of City Committee voting. Once again, here's the winning question:

"My questions are about Indianapolis migration trends within I-465. Is the downtown housing boom sustainable? How many racial and economic minorities are being forced out? Where are they going? I'd like to see a story focused on answering these questions."

As I said in last week's newsletter, I am really excited by the responses readers have shared to my request for help on this subject.

Allison Luthe, executive director of the Martin Luther King Community Center, pointed me towards the work of the Indiana University Public Policy Institute. After I mentioned that in last week's newsletter, Leslie Wells, assistant director of communications for the School of Public and Environmental Affairs at PPI, offered to put me in touch with Breanca Merritt, the director for PPI's Center for Research on Inclusion and Social Policy. I just emailed her back to set up a time to talk early next week.

Also, Jennifer Chan of Porch Light PR, reached out after last week's newsletter went out to suggest Joanna Taft, executive director of the Harrison Center, as a possible resource. I also just emailed her back to set up a time to talk next week, as well.

Thursday evening at The Toby at Newfields, I had the chance to listen to a presentation by Pulitzer Prize-winning author Matthew Desmond. An anonymous donor purchased 200 copies of his book, Evicted: Poverty and Profit in the American City. Abri Hochstetler, associate director of communications and annual giving for the Greater Indy Habitat for Humanity, who invited me to attend the event, was generous enough to provide me a copy.

I am reading it now. It's a stunning work so far. The housing crisis is such an expansive topic, and I think Desmond does a great service by focusing on a few families. People get turned off if they think a problem is too big, and humanizing it in this way is so important. Have you read this book? Send me an email at rburgess@nuvo.net and let me know what you thought. I'd love to hear your perspective.

After Matthew's talk, there was a panel discussion moderated by Pamela Ross, vice president of opportunity, equity and inclusion with Central Indiana Community Foundation. Panelists included: Joyce Hertko, PhD, director of community outreach and engagement at Indiana University Health; Vop Osili, chair of the Indianapolis City-County Council; George McMannis, vice president of compliance and operations, BWI Property Management; Michael Hurst, senior attorney at Indiana Legal Services; and Crystal Haslett, MSW, LCSW, coordinator of student programs and McKinney-Vento

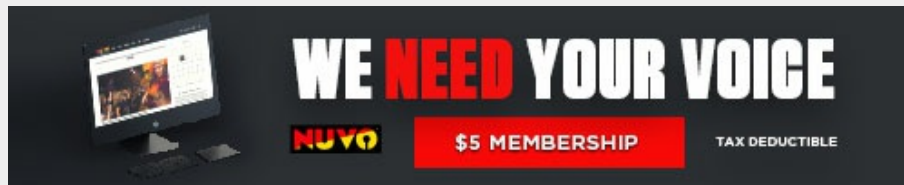

Education for Homeless Children and Youth liaison, Metropolitan School District of Washington Township. It was a great discussion which I think will add a lot of depth to this story.

Third, I'm spending the day at the Statehouse today for 2019 Renewable Energy Day as advocates from across Indiana will "meet with lawmakers and rally for clean energy policies that will create good-paying jobs, improve air and water quality, and lower electric bills for all Hoosiers." Attendees will include renewable energy supporters from around the state, supported by Solar United Neighbors of Indiana, Indiana Distributed Energy Alliance, Hoosier Interfaith Power & Light, Citizens Action Coalition, Hoosier Environmental Council, Solarize Indiana, Sierra Club, and Earth Charter Indiana. If you're around, please make sure to stop by and say hello.

I hope you have an amazing rest of your week. Talk to you again next Wednesday.

Best,

Rob Burgess

Still Curious, Still a Mix: A Talk with WFYI's Jill Ditmire

Jill Ditmire talks not only about her weekly arts program Curious Mix on WFYI 90.1, but also about her six-year-stint as owner of the Mass Ave Wine Shoppe. Read more

Readers Reflect on Indy's Music Strategy: Part 1

Seth asked our readers for their thoughts on Indy's music community and ways they think it can improve. Read more

Taking a New Direction In Journalism

NUVO is reinventing community journalism online and we want you to be a part of it. Will you join us? Read more

NUVO, 3951 N. Meridian St., Suite 200, Indianapolis, IN 46208

SafeUnsubscribe™ rburgess@nuvo.net

Update Profile | About our service provider

Sent by newsletter@nuvo.net